Hampton Tedder Technical Services (HTTS) Offers NFPA 70E & PPE Training

NFPA 70E standard paves the way for a new generation of improved electrical danger safety!

Electrical dangers such as shock, electrocution, arc flash, and arc blast will always be present on the job, but proper training and safety strategies can minimize the likelihood of injuries and fatalities. A newer standard, NFPA 70E: Electrical Safety in the Workplace, covers a whole array of electrical safety issues, such as work practices, special equipment requirements, maintenance, and installation.

Personal protective equipment (PPE) and clothing requirements for arc flash, commonly called PPE, is an equally important topic. OSHA now bases its electrical safety mandates on broad information found in the NFPA's recent and important NFPA 70E Standard.

HTTS seminars include training on arc flash awareness, standards and codes, understanding of arc flash quantities, as well as the reading and following of warning signs and labels. Gain important updates to NFPA 70E standards! Our training is taught by working power engineers, from HTTS' staff, that present this up-to-the-minute information in simple language. NFPA 70E training by HTTS can be obtained by attending our half-day seminar at a cost of only \$150 per person.

Additionally, a bewildering array of solutions to electric arc flash hazards like face shields, insulated rubber gloves, insulated tools, temporary grounding equipment, voltage detectors, and rubber insulating products, exists. Do you know who needs what when?? Find out by attending our full-day seminar that covers both the NFPA 70E standard and PPE requirements for a cost of only $200 per person.

We'd welcome your email to james.petroff@hamptonedder.com, you can visit us at www.hamptonedder.com/, or call an office nearest you listed in the sidebar to discuss your particular concern.

Applicable taxes will be added to the price.
